

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

This present invention provides generic and flexible methods to represent optical bandwidth and service interfaces for optical label switching networks. Most importantly, bandwidth may be represented simply at various granularity levels and in various 5 combinations. This simplicity will greatly help in design and implementation of protocols for use in optical label switching networks.